The Possession (2012) Plot A father and his ex-wife are concerned after their daughter claims to have seen a man she does not recognize coming out of her closet while her family sleeps. They want to know if it is someone from the family's past or if it is someone else entirely. When her younger brother goes to take a shower, he experiences some unusual happenings himself, which he is unable to explain. As her father insists on finding out the truth behind the haunting, she becomes so scared that she tries to commit suicide by hanging herself in the garage. The father and his ex-wife begin to search the house and grounds for what is causing these disturbances. Eventually, they find a Ouija board, and begin to play with it. The ghost of the father's deceased grandfather begins to take control of the board. The father and his ex-wife try to stop the Ouija board from communicating with the spirit, but they begin to communicate themselves. When the father and his ex-wife go to the attic, they find a locked room. The father uses a crowbar to break down the door and is attacked by the spirit. He loses control and is able to open the door to the room in the attic. The room is full of newspapers, and the father takes one. Upon reading a particular article, he realizes that he has been the target of the ghost for a long time, and the ghost begins to haunt the house. He also realizes that this is not the spirit of his deceased grandfather but rather an entity that wants to possess his family's lives. This spirit is going to take possession of his daughter's body and make the younger brother her husband. The father and his ex-wife realize what has happened. They trap the spirit in the locked room. The father and his ex-wife leave the house and go to a church to perform a blessing to end the possession.
