However, with today's alternative lending options, you can still get approved for a mortgage. When you work with a qualified loan officer, you'll find a solution that is customized to meet your needs. Take some time to consider the various lenders and their loan programs to determine which will be the best fit for your credit situation. Lenders will usually present you with a pre-qualification form that details the rates and terms of each loan program they offer. While this pre-qualification will provide you with a general idea of the interest rate and repayment you can expect, you may still have to visit a mortgage broker or lender to get a pre-approval letter. This letter is the final piece of the puzzle that allows the lender to run a credit check on you. Steps to get pre-approved for a mortgage If you're approved for a mortgage but you don't have a letter from your lender stating as much, take the time to make a call to your lender to make sure that you're on track to receive the pre-approval you need. While the requirements may vary by lender, you should still expect to be required to provide your basic information and a copy of your current credit report. You'll also need to know your current interest rate and any other terms you may be required to agree to. Be sure to ask about the maximum mortgage amount that the lender will offer you. Some lenders will approve loans of up to $500,000, while others limit the amount to $250,000 or less. If you're not sure about your current interest rate, it's a good idea to call your lender and ask about your pre-approved amount. Doing so will allow you to make an educated decision about the maximum amount of money you should agree to borrow.Q: I am not able to display data in my lightning component?
