consequence of accumulation of genetic and epigenetic alterations. Ovarian cancer is genetically diverse and distinct subtypes are known to respond differently to chemotherapy. Our study indicates that normal and cancer stem cells within ovarian tumours are different in their cancer-promoting potential in immune-competent mice. Researchers at the University of Gothenburg used a mouse model with immune-competent mice injected with human ovarian cancer cells to study the properties of the cancer stem cells. The results were published in the journal Oncogene, in an article entitled "Cancer stem cells in human ovarian cancer are
