Update : June 2020 Q: Trouble using oracle regexp_like function I've got a query using the like clause SELECT * FROM testTable WHERE cloumnName REGEXP_LIKE '^%' However, this query only returns the record if the search term is at the beginning of the string. Any suggestions on how to get the query to match the beginning or end of the string? A: You can use REGEXP_SUBSTR. SELECT * FROM testTable WHERE REGEXP_SUBSTR(cloumnName, '^', 1, 1) = '%'; The sub-string gets a string, then a start position and then a length. Targeted gene knockout in the zebrafish, Danio rerio. Zebrafish have emerged as a useful model for studies of vertebrate development and human disease. A major goal in developmental genetics is to isolate mutant alleles of individual genes in zebrafish, but to date, few methods for targeted mutagenesis in zebrafish have been developed. Here, we describe a method for producing a knockout mutation in the zebrafish genome. The technique is based on homologous recombination of a gene-targeting vector into the zebrafish genome. This results in disruption of the coding sequence of the gene by insertion of a selection cassette. Targeted gene knockout in the zebrafish is demonstrated using a transgenic strain that contains a fusion gene encoding beta-galactosidase under the control of the endothelial-specific promoter, loricrin. Injection of 40 pg of a circular plasmid containing the beta-gal
