[14] Shihab's Perspective on Working Women Issue: An Analysis in His Book, Tafsīr, al-Misbāh Mohd Hisyam Abdul Rahim and Zulkifli Mohd Yusoff emerged as Greensman discusses East London's potential to become the UK's largest international hub Tory councillor Paul Martin has taken a closer look at a series of upcoming global events in East London, including the flagship conference of the global financial services industry in the capital in May. Andy Greensman, Green Party London Assembly representative, says the East London Council (ELC) should be a top candidate for attracting major sporting and entertainment events, helping to develop the region's economy and make it a major centre of international trade and investment. Paul said: "I'd welcome the prospect of an Olympics for London, but first you need to show that you can organise and deliver a successful event. "East London has a superb transport network, a wonderful waterfront and has some of the best and most accessible parks in the country. It is a natural base for the Olympics and for major sporting and entertainment events. "The region is a key destination for international tourism and I hope ELC will agree to work in partnership with us in developing plans to help East London exploit its potential. "If anything, a successful outcome from the London Olympics would help attract major sporting and entertainment events. I'd like to see East London take full advantage of the Olympics as a catalyst to attract major events to the area." with informal care at such a level that the development of models of care planning would become even more relevant \[\[@CR43]\]. Methodological limitations include the reliance on self-reports of informal caregiving, which may underestimate the hours provided \[\[@CR44]\], and the failure to include a control group of individuals with comparable characteristics without informal caregiving. Replication of this study in a non-urban setting could also reveal the extent to which the current findings may be generalizable outside of an urban setting. In the future, it would be worthwhile to examine differences between informal care receivers with and without co-residing informal caregivers, even if the former may differ in important ways from the latter.
