Saudi Arabia has signed an $11 billion deal to buy two more super-carriers from the US-based Huntington Ingalls Industries, the world's largest shipbuilder. The deal, which is still being ratified by the kingdom's cabinet, comes as the kingdom is seeking to build its fleet of aircraft carriers to become the world's top operator. The Jeddah-based kingdom has signed deals for the construction of US navy destroyers and the construction of a heavy-lift aircraft that is designed to carry the larger aircraft carriers that will emerge from the new programme. But it has not yet laid its hands on an aircraft carrier of its own, a project that will face a huge cost and time overrun. King Salman received US President Donald Trump in Riyadh on Sunday, and the two leaders are expected to discuss the carrier programme and other strategic issues during their talks. It is unclear whether the Saudi leadership sees a need for more carriers than its three current ones and how many carriers it will buy.

"Huntington Ingalls Industries, Inc. (NYSE:HII) announced that it has signed a contract with the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia for two aircraft carrier construction (AC/RC) contracts for the Saudi Arabian Navy (SAR)." "The total value of the contracts is $11 billion." The first AC/RC contract is valued at $7 billion. The second contract is worth $3 billion. "The contract includes the construction of the USS George H W Bush aircraft carrier, the first of which will be delivered in 2023 and the second in 2025. "Additionally, the company has received a $1.5 billion contract for the construction of two US Navy DDG 1000 series destroyers for the SAR." The deal with the US naval industrial complex comes at a time when the Saudi leadership wants to diversify its export markets, diversify its military power and is looking at how to cope with internal challenges. It is also looking at how to keep its foreign operations going during the ongoing anti-corruption campaign. "Huntington Ingalls Industries, Inc. (NYSE:HII), the largest shipbuilder in the US, is a leading global shipbuilder and naval systems integrator that offers comprehensive solutions for the world's navies and energy industries. "HII is the world's largest shipbuilder," said the company in a statement. "HII's production
