talented sophomore what he's been looking for all offseason. Kevin Steele, a 6-foot-6, 313-pound redshirt sophomore, will be one of Alabama's three starting offensive linemen when the Tide opens the 2017 season against LSU on Aug. 31. Steele started 13 games in 2016 at right guard for the Crimson Tide, but missed the entire 2017 preseason camp with a leg injury. Alabama offensive line coach Mario Cristobal said Steele started on the second string at right guard and played against Clemson and

Auburn in the 2016 season opener. "He's got real, real good feet," Cristobal said. "He's a natural center. He's a really tough guy. He's got good footwork. He's a really good pass protector. He's got good feet. He's a really tough kid. You don't need much to get him going. He's got good leadership qualities." The Crimson Tide have lacked a consistent center since Barrett Jones left in 2014, starting four different players in his absence. Leeper, the No. 4 overall pick in the 2015 NFL Draft, started the first seven games of the 2016 season at center but missed the rest of the year after having foot surgery. Steele was named the starting center on the depth chart released earlier this week. He made his first start at center against Tennessee in the SEC Championship Game. Steele will be joined in the starting lineup by left tackle Jonah Williams and left guard Jonah Williams, who will be the two starters on the interior of the offensive line. The two brothers are roommates at Alabama and go by the first name "Jon" and "Jonah."

"They're going to get the best reps of anyone on the offensive line," Steele said. "

complete removal of the affected lung through the chest wall without the need for a thoracotomy.

Previous techniques involved a minithoracotomy, which exposed the internal mammary artery and required rerouting of the pulmonary artery. The extrapleural approach avoids this second incision and preserves the integrity of the thoracic wall. We report a series of 23 patients who underwent 23 thoracoscopic extrapleural pneumonectomies for non-small cell lung cancer. In addition to complete removal of the lung and lymph nodes, this technique provides visualization of the blood supply to
