Navigation options You can also choose between different display styles, such as icon, small lists, or details. The program also provides a basic editor, which allows you to re-arrange the shortcut pairs, change their keyboard layouts, colors and backgrounds. Macros: While you can save your macros to a file, or to the program, the latter option is by far the most useful, because you can edit them anytime, and use them on any computer. In all Macros appear in a list, with name and description, and when selected, open the Macro editor. Key shortcut pair creation The program automatically provides a set of macros, which can be used to create shortcut keys. At the time of this review, I was also given the ability to create additional macros, but as yet, I haven't been able to find a way to save them, or open them from anywhere other than within the program. However, the program does allow you to customize the shortcut names and locations, and the list of available macros shows only those that you've created yourself. Creating new shortcuts Creating new shortcuts is simple, and follows a format similar to that of the macro editor. To start off, you choose the shortcut name, and then a location for it. You can also give the new key a key shortcut, and a description. Adding a key shortcut pair The dialog to create new shortcut keys, comes with a few preset macros, but you can also create your own, using the same field as in the Macro editor. Visit: A handy tool for encrypting files in the advanced version of the free Internet security software provided by Comodo. The software is rated highly for its compatibility with various operating systems, and its high speed encryption capabilities. In its free version, it offers you the possibility of creating a total of four encryption keys, two of which will be stored on your device. File encryption is never a fun task, and with Comodo Internet Security's CryptoMaster you'll only have to remember a password to access your protected files, whatever the location or size of the files. The basic version of the software, however, offers only two encryption keys, and they'll be stored on your device. Even if you buy the paid version, you'll have to make sure you always keep the file encryption key safe somewhere, for you never know when you'll need it. An option of generating a recovery key is available for the paid version, but it's not on by default. This option will be used in case of an emergency, to recover your files and folders, even if your device gets lost or stolen. What you'll need to do is to save the file on a storage device that's always connected to your computer, or you can even set a default for your new or existing drives. You'll also need to get your recovery key from the product's official website. Note that this free version is actually a separate application, and it's not part of the main application. A dialog is displayed when you install it, and you can select which main application you want to use. After you install it, it's time to enter the default password for the software. A default password will be stored in the program's settings, and it will be provided to you on request. Once you've created all the passwords you need, you

Q: DirectX Accessory Device List Is there any documentation (or even better a code sample) that would show how to get the list of all DirectX hardware accessory devices that are plugged into the computer? The user should be able to find the information through the Device Manager, but I can't find any information on this at all. A: There's the Graphics Device Enumerator API. This might be exactly what you're looking for: AP New defensive coordinator Gregg Williams said before the Titans beat the Rams in Week One that he plans to hold new defensive end Jurrell Casey accountable. The Rams offense didn't exactly have an answer for Williams, but the Titans defensive line did enough to earn their coach some extra praise. While the Titans' attack ended up being unspectacular, Williams credited the way they closed out the game for his first win as a defensive coordinator. Williams was asked if he had a message for Casey, who hadn't registered a sack in his first three years in the league. "We have to make sure he's playing well and that he understands he's got to be a disruptor," Williams said, via the Tennessean. "And he's got to be disruptive at home. He's got to be disruptive away from home. He's got to be disruptive in the early part of the game. And he's got to do a better job of that. But we're not going to — this is probably the first time I'm going to give you a little pep talk, but we're not going to let you play at the level of a dominant player. We're
