Comes with a smart, double-panel interface The setup is simple and straightforward, as it entails decompressing the archive and then following a few generic steps to install the application. Upon launch, you come face to face with a clean, intuitive and smart double-panel GUI. It is necessary to mention that the utility allows you to alter the font, color and size of the text you are typing, so you can customize the app to better suit your working style and preferences. You can only change the color of the text, but not the backgrounds or that of the preview content. It would have been useful if you could modify the background, particularly if you are planning to design a page with specific colors. Enables you to edit the code and preview the design The strong point of the program stems from the fact that it allows you to preview the design, text and other modifications you want to make immediately in the layout page. The application comes with an undo function, a feature that could come in handy when you are unsure about the last edit you made or when you applied a change that affected the entire code, for instance. You should know that the utility is rather simplistic and hence, does not incorporate advanced features such as syntax highlight or auto-complete. While advanced users can manage without the aforementioned options, it would be helpful if the app came with a search

See and edit HTML on your Macintosh The program allows you to preview your edits in real-time, which is very handy. It is evident that the application was designed to assist you in creating web pages and hence the interface is not without issues. The interface lacks any functionality in order to set up shortcuts to frequently used commands. So, if you frequently switch between the various parts of the application, you may find it tricky to do so within the preferences window. The app does not make the modifications you make in it instantly visible. You must save your HTML page to preview it, which makes the application a bit slow. Also, it would be helpful if you could set up a hot-key to save the HTML document at any time, so you could set it as an auto-save feature, which will not only save your time but also saves you from having to manually save your page each time you finish working on it.
