I'm learning Scala from a Python perspective and as a result of a few weeks of playing with Scala I'm totally overwhelmed and not able to comprehend how to do many basic things I'm used to do in Python. For example, if I want to reverse an array, I use the built in in-place reverse method in Python: `a = [1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6] a.reverse() # a == [6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1]` (I've never used a Python list, nor know what the `abc` module is, and I won't even list them as there's too many things I don't understand) But the equivalent thing in Scala is so much more convoluted, involving reversing a list using an external library, for example: `scala> def reverse[T](l: List[T]): List[T] = { | l match { | case h :: t => (h.reverse, t) | case Nil => Nil | } | } reverse: [T](l: List[T])(implicit evidence$1: scala.collection.mutable.List[T] => scala.collection.mutable.List[T])List[T] scala> val a = List(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6) a: List[Int] = List(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6) scala> reverse(a) res1: List[Int] = List(6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1) I don't understand what is a list of T in the first line of code. I just don't get it. If I want to use an array of length 2 and build a string from it, I again run into difficulties that I feel are related to the fact that 82138339de`
