Field of the Invention This invention generally relates to a method of and an apparatus for protecting a substrate or a workpiece such as a semiconductor wafer or a glass plate from contamination by a foreign material and, more particularly, to a method of and an apparatus for protection from contamination, such as particulate contamination, in an environment in which air contains a foreign material, such as particulate matter, such as dust. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, there has been used a substrate or a workpiece such as a semiconductor wafer or a glass plate, which is formed into a large-area substrate or a large-area workpiece, for manufacturing a semiconductor integrated circuit or a display panel of a liquid crystal display device. The wafer-shaped substrate or the workpiece is subjected to various processings, including a chemical process, a mechanical process and a thermal process, in a clean-room. The clean-room is an environment in which air is controlled in the interior of the clean-room to be clean, and has an ultra-low contamination rate of approximately 0.1 to approximately 1 particle/m³. However, in an actual environment in which a semiconductor wafer or a workpiece is handled, the contamination rate is approximately 0.1 particle/m³ at the most, and has a high probability of occurrence of an instantaneous contamination. Further, the contamination rate is increased depending on the nature of the semiconductor wafer or the workpiece. A representative technique of coping with the instantaneous contamination is disclosed in, for example, U.S. Pat. No. 6,266,568. According to this technique, the contamination rate is reduced by separating a large quantity of foreign materials in the air by a filter, and then utilizing the clean air from the filter. This technique will be described below with reference to FIG. 10. As illustrated in FIG. 10, a foreign material filter system 200 includes a filter 202, a clean air fan 204, an exhaust duct 206 and an exhaust 5b5f913d15
