They're working correctly as far as I know. Now I need to edit some Django templates. So when I create a new project from WebStorm, it will create a configuration for Django. But I need one configuration for Django and another one for PostgreSQL. I know that I can create those configurations manually, but I'm wondering if there is a way to have WebStorm to provide those configurations for me. A: This is already possible since WebStorm 9.0.2 EAP (You can install additional JetBrains plugins to use various features of WebStorm and WebStorm Gebt. But you need to be sure you have right (not "1.0.0") version of the plugin installed. BTW, you can also configure it via Settings | External Tools | Create... Custom Plugins. If you've been following Xs and Os of the Nuggets, you probably know that Ty Lawson has been impressing the coaches with his willingness to shoot. This, of course, is a change from the "hockey assist" style of play that has characterized the Nuggets in recent years. Lawson and his coach have been charting his accuracy, with Lawson shooting at least five shots per game 1d6a3396d6

I am trying to learn to display images in a Windows Forms window. My code is pretty simple but it's not working. I think I may be using the wrong control?

private void Generate() { string filename = "file.png"; Bitmap MyImage = Image.FromFile(filename); Bitmap MyImage2 = MyImage; //I can display an image from the file I want here but //all it does is show me the correct value of MyImage2 pictureBox1.Image = MyImage; }

 I've been using code I found on this site and this site but it is not working. A: If you want to display an image in a PictureBox, you first need to load the image into a Bitmap variable. Then assign the Bitmap to the PictureBox.Image property. Also, it is generally better to use an Image as opposed to a Bitmap.

private void Generate() { string filename = "file.png"; Image MyImage = Image.FromFile(filename); Bitmap MyImage2 = MyImage; pictureBox1.Image = MyImage; }
