What's New In?

Convert NSF files from IBM Notes or Domino Server to Novell GroupWise. It works with: Lotus Notes 8.5.2 and 9, IBM Domino Server 8.5.2, and Novell GroupWise 6.5 Your comments about this software are welcome to help improve it. A: Your question is somewhat unspecific, but I think it's close to the answer to your question. At the very least you might want to take a look at Lotus Notes Server Migration Suite. This is an addon for Lotus Notes that will allow you to convert the data in your Notes database into Novell GroupWise. But again, I don't know enough about this solution to give you a good answer. Q: Can I use same entity in multiple sequences I have 3 sequences: @Entity class Foo { @Id private Integer id; private String name; // More entities of type Foo } @Entity class Bar { @Id private Integer id; private String name; // More entities of type Bar } @Entity class OtherBar { @Id private Integer id; private String name; // More entities of type OtherBar } In my FooRepository.findAll() method I want to get the list of all the Foos. But then I also want to have a list of Bar, and an list of OtherBars. The only solution I can think of is having a method like: private List getFoos() {... } private List getBars() {... } private List getOtherBars() {... } But that feels like a bit of overkill, am I missing something here? A: I am not a fan of letting database manage all of that, so I tend to use an Aggregate Root to wrap my entities and do all of the validation, life cycle, and validation (not the business logic). public class FooAggregateRoot implements AggregateRoot { @Id private Integer id; private String name; @OneToMany(mappedBy = "foo") private List bars; @OneToMany(mappedBy = "foo") private List otherBar; ... } public
