What's New In Avast! EasyPass?

avast! EasyPass is a reliable password manager that is capable of safely storing your credentials and other sensitive information, while also allowing fast login and form completion. Powerful data security capabilities Focusing mainly on data protection, avast! EasyPass encrypts all the data you input using strong AES encryption algorithms. The security key is automatically generated based on the user-defined master password, which you must provide in order to gain access to the stored usernames and passwords. In addition to this, it relies on the SSL protocol in order to secure the transfers that occur between your computer and the online EasyPass servers, making sure that the information is not intercepted along the way. One-click access to data in an intuitive interface The application categorizes all your data into different sections, offering fast access to each from within its well-organized interface. Aside from login information, you can use it to store bookmarks, contact details, addresses, credit card data, bank accounts, car insurance and any other significant information that you want to safeguard. Also, there is a section for creating a contacts address book and another one dedicated to writing and keeping personal notes. Field type recognition and form completion avast! EasyPass is capable of identifying common field types in web forms, having them completed in minutes based on the stored data. It saves you the time needed to perform this operation manually, thus improving productivity and enhancing workflow. The FBI is investigating the activities of 60 Russian companies — since 2013 — that work on software related to cryptocurrencies. One of the companies involved is allegedly a Russian intelligence-linked firm. Kaspersky Lab said on April 12 that the lead was an international law enforcement agency, while the Russian business daily Kommersant cited unnamed sources who described the investigation as part of the General Intelligence Directorate. The FBI already investigated the Kremlin-linked company previously due to its activities in the US, according to Reuters. Kaspersky Lab also denied that its software was being used by Russian intelligence-linked groups, adding: "Instead, we believe they are being used by criminals for hacking and other cyber-crimes." The company said it is cooperating fully with the investigation. Kremlin-linked companies In a March 19 briefing, the FBI said that the companies had targeted cryptocurrency wallets, mining centers, exchanges and marketplaces. "The suspects are colluding among each other to compromise victims, steal cryptocurrency, and launder
