Oct 8, 2019 The Festival starts in the NE corner of the village, between the new bandstand and the high fence. The music is cool, and the mellow, melancholy folk-inspired music has been the festival's trademark for years. Robert Griffin III didn't entirely win a game against the Houston Texans in Week 14. That much, at least, is evident by the way the Redskins' fans are treating RG3. I know he plays for the Redskins now, but I'm a fan first and a journalist second. I like to remind myself of that every now and then. Before he went down for the season in Week 10 with a knee injury, RG3 had been on a bit of a tear. He'd turned the corner on his rehab from microfracture surgery, wowing the doubters along the way. He'd even done something that RG3 had never done: he'd done RG3's signature dive. Let me pause here to remind myself that RG3 was once a five-year starting quarterback in the National Football League, that he threw almost 60 touchdown passes and that he was considered by many as the face of the franchise before he tore his ACL in 2012. For a guy who, until this year, was largely persona non grata in Washington, RG3's story has been amazing. That story has continued on, too, even in his absence. Although the Redskins have fallen to 2-11 and are in contention for the first pick in the draft, the team is succeeding without him. When your defense gives up 31 points in a loss to a division rival, you can't have the fans booing you in the end zone.
