Magnetic nanoparticles functionalized with phosphonate moieties have been synthesized and studied as potential contrast agents for magnetic resonance imaging. Phosphonate-modified amine-functionalized iron oxide nanocrystals were synthesized by a two-step precipitation approach. The biocompatibility of the nanoparticles was assessed in vitro on human embryonic kidney cells (HEK293) using a 3-(4,5-dimethylthiazol-2-yl)-2,5-diphenyltetrazolium bromide (MTT) assay, demonstrating their high biocompatibility. Functionalization with phosphonate groups did not adversely affect the biocompatibility of the magnetic nanoparticles. The MP3 Organizer program can be described as an effective music organizer, one which can be used for categorizing the music files under the proper artist name. The application displays the name of the artist as well as the file name, as a means of keeping everything in one place. With the help of such a program, you can efficiently manage the files that your music collection contains. Whether you are working at home or your office, you can resort to it, for the purpose of sorting your music files, according to the artist name. This is achieved by simply selecting the desired directory and clicking on the 'Organize' button. All the files contained there will be then separated and categorized based on the artist name, which is done automatically. What makes it more effective is the fact that if you wish to sort your music into the artist's name format 'Artist Before Song' or 'Song Before Artist', the program does not take long to determine the correct order. The files are sorted in accordance with the artist name, according to the selected option. Furthermore, the program supports different formats, including flac, wav, aiff, mp3 and ogg. The quality of the music files plays no part, as the software has the ability to read them all and organize them based on the artist name, regardless of their quality. It supports Windows XP/Vista/7/8 platforms. Since the program is easy to use, the sorter can be used by anyone.
