Serial by Manga Empire. by Techabuse On Thursday, Oct. 31, 2016, the Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM) in partnership with the Division of Emergency Management in the Virginia Department of Health (VDH), and the Virginia State Fire Marshal's Office issued a health advisory that you should work with your health care provider when the possibility of any respiratory exposure to Ebola virus or other unknown virus or pathogen exists. The advisory states that the risk of a healthcare provider becoming infected from direct contact with an Ebola-infected patient is considered extremely low, but unknown. It recommends that health care providers wear appropriate personal protective equipment while providing care to any suspected Ebola-infected patient. The guidance applies to emergency rooms, emergency medical services, long-term acute care hospitals, assisted-living facilities, and other locations that provide care to possible Ebola-infected patients. The possibility of close and prolonged contact with other Ebola-infected patients or their bodily fluids also exists, and health care providers should take precautions. Established in 2000, the Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM) is committed to providing timely, effective, and efficient emergency management services. The department is comprised of a professional staff of emergency and emergency medical service (EMS) personnel, as well as public information specialists. In response to the recommendation, the VDH is working with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to assist health care providers at hospitals in determining what personal protective equipment is recommended, and how to properly treat and dispose of protective clothing. The VDH is also working with public health and EMS officials, who are facing the challenge of protecting and providing care to possible Ebola-infected patients, to determine what personal 570a42141b
