Securely redeem a one button activation code on your Xbox 360, PS3 or PS4.Q: Python: skip lines with specific attribute I'm trying to import a large amount of .fastq files in a directory and would like to skip lines with the attribute "Watson" (from the watson software used to align the reads). The files are named as: I can import them using import pandas as pd import numpy as np data = pd.DataFrame(pd.read_table("Watson.fastq", sep="\t")) I would like to know how to exclude all the Watson fastq files from the import, any suggestions? A: You can use the glob module to recursively find all the .fastq files in the directory you wish to import. import glob import pandas as pd import numpy as np data = pd.DataFrame(pd.read_table(".fastq", sep="\t")) if you wish to import only Watson.fastq files use import glob import pandas as pd import numpy as np path = r'/path/to/Watson/folder/' filenames = glob.glob(path + '.fastq') data = pd.DataFrame(pd.read_table(filenames[0], sep="\t")) I would also strongly advise you to rename the files to use a more sensible name - this is how you avoid accidentally importing all of your .fastq files. I'm a yellow I'm a yellow I like lime green I'm a scarlet red I like purple light I'm a color chart When I was born you didn't know how bright I was A pinkish purple with bits of blue And I don't know what color you're supposed to call me now But I see you're trying real hard I'm a little yellow I'm a little yellow I'm a little yellow I'm a little yellow And I want you to see that I'm a yellowQ: 4bc0debe42
