Find and replace text in multiple Microsoft Word documents. MS Word Add Headers and Footers To Multiple Documents Software Crack Mac Free Download link :By end of 2014, over 6 million women had been sterilized. The female sterilization campaign began in 1952 in the Indian state of Uttar Pradesh, and in 1953 the government announced a policy to eliminate “unwanted” childbirths by adding female sterilization to the total of state sponsored family planning. In a following budget, the government announced that it was “imperative” to implement the policy without delay. Within a year India’s 13 million women married at a young age and made their first sex child. This was a major success. Over the course of the decades, people believed that the percentage of women suffering from sterilization had been steadily rising. But in 2007 a researcher from the United States made a startling discovery. Sumantha Datta had taken a closer look at the sterilization statistics to find out whether a particular caste had been targeted. Surprisingly, she found that members of the Scheduled Castes had accounted for only 10 percent of the total sterilizations in India up until the 1990s. Yet just a decade later, this number had risen to 63 percent. Datta’s research showed that the program targeted Scheduled Castes more than any other religion, and that this was the result of discrimination and social exclusion. A large number of members of the Scheduled Castes were confined to untouchability. Many were segregated and didn't have access to education, family planning, or proper health care. Some only had to see family planning as "extracting their tax." "This means that many members of the Scheduled Castes... willingly accepted sterilization as an alternative to death by starvation or to disease and child birth," Datta wrote. "Like hard labor, sterilization was seen as a form of 'escape from the cycle of labor and death.'" The negative portrayal of the male victims of India's sterilization is even more under reported. The male population was believed to be a hindrance to carrying out the policy of female sterilization and were being oppressed. However, male sterilization was as much of a violation as female sterilization. The India's National Human Rights Commission reported that male sterilization was "more brutal than female." The fact that the government discouraged women
