1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to a folded chip material endless transfer belt and a method of fabricating the same.

2. Related Art Conventionally, a folded chip endless transfer belt has been used as a belt for conveying a chip, a chip to be transferred, or other members. Such a folded chip endless transfer belt has a structure in which two endless belt members foldable from each other are bonded to each other and the bonded portion is sealed, and further folded. Each of the endless belt members is provided with a plurality of fold lines extending in a longitudinal direction of the endless belt members and these fold lines are formed such that a section between adjacent fold lines are compressed and curved while maintaining a flat and flat-folding shape for the endless belt members. Further, the sections of the endless belt members between fold lines are curved along with a curvature of the fold lines, so that the two endless belt members are folded and sealed to each other in a compact shape. The conventional folded chip endless transfer belt is fabricated in the manner as described above. However, the endless belt member made of chip material has a problem such as a decrease in thickness of an end of the endless belt member in a longitudinal direction due to an excessively high chip density of the end. Therefore, it is an object of the invention to provide a folded chip endless transfer belt and a method of fabricating the same, which are capable of maintaining a thickness of an endless belt member at a predetermined value and preventing an end of the endless belt member from being thinner than the predetermined value. A folded chip endless transfer belt according to the invention has a first endless belt member foldable from a second endless belt member and a body foldable around a fold line on each of the endless belt members. In a method of fabricating a folded chip endless transfer belt according to the invention, the first endless belt member is formed at least substantially in a flat shape and further foldable, and the second endless belt member is formed at least substantially in a flat shape and further foldable. Then, the fold line is formed on each of the endless belt members, so that the first endless belt member is folded from the
