Take control of any business with the #1 word processing solution. Office 2010 is a significant improvement to the best-selling word processor of all time. The word processing application Office 2010 is known for its smoothness and speed. However, for all its virtues, Office 2010 has some shortcomings. For example, sometimes Office 2010 might automatically format a document into a new paragraph, or it can omit a word or sentence that you might have missed and it can make a spelling mistake. It is easy to add standard headers and footers (both text and graphical) in Microsoft Word 2010 and retain the current formatting. All you need is a.HDR or a.BMP file that contains the header or footer. This tutorial uses Microsoft Word 2010 on Windows 8. 1. If you have not created a new document yet, create a new file using Word 2010 or open any existing document. 2. Select the header or footer image
