What's New In CleverTrack?

Easy to use web-based software that is completely tailored to the needs of QA professionals Provides a centralized and uniform tool for managing projects, test cases, test scripts, bug reports and test results Works both offline and online, saving the user time from downloading all data and setup Includes a full feature set for requirements management, test case management, bug tracking, email notification and reporting Designed with performance and ease of use in mind Written in PHP, with MySQL (for data storage) Uses custom PostgreSQL database (if MySQL is not an option) The more testing data you collect, the more predictable and stable the software will be. If your software is unpredictable, users have to work harder or some will end up unhappy. In our experience, people who have seen their software behave for users in new ways are very nervous about their product. When it comes to bugs, most software is most likely to be bad-tested, resulting in a large number of usability problems that are not detected. We are constantly hearing from users that our software works "fine", and this is one of the reasons why it is so hard to find bugs in our software. CleverTrack does not only work in a professional environment, but also in the home-user arena. Many consumers are blissfully unaware of this fact, and the result is that they assume their software to work perfectly. There is, however, one place where this is not the case. In the home, children are the ones who know the most about computer software, and of course they know which games work just fine, and which ones are utter rubbish. The trick, of course, is to catch them when they are being brilliant and help them to avoid the bad experiences they get from the rubbish. CleverTrack includes a language-neutral UI and is available worldwide. If your company speaks another language, you will also find translations for CleverTrack. If you have any questions regarding our software and language translations, please do not hesitate to contact us! CleverTrack is powered by the combination of all the high-level and low-level concepts, so please, do not be shy to contact us! Technical Support: Plugins and Extensions: Support:
