Well, for a start, simply click on the icon in the system tray to open it. Then you will have to select your audio output device, your speaker setup and the volume level. In addition, you can choose to mute all other audio and adjust the volume of each in equal steps. Your speakers are as individual as you are. As you can see, two identical speakers will have different levels. The same is true of front and rear speakers, but you can change the balance level. After adjusting the sound, all you have to do is click "OK". You'll be able to control the volume for the current applications using the system tray icon (which can be hidden or minimized, if desired). Or you can go to "Options", select a volume scheme and apply user presets. What are user presets? Well, this is pretty much where the program comes into its own. You can set volume levels for different applications. For instance, you can mute a game, Skype and audio recording during the day. The program is in German, but you can find many user manuals in English. The only thing we're not happy with is the lack of microphone controls
