NetTraffic is a part of the PVS-Studio static analyzer. This analyzer checks .NET applications for common mistakes and can be used together with other tools like VS2010, FxCop or PVS-Studio and can improve the productivity of the development process. The idea of NetTraffic is to find .NET memory leaks, sometimes called as the leaky buckets problem. To do so, it compares both running and unloaded .NET binaries after running them through the memory profiler. NetTraffic can be installed in the same time as Visual Studio 2010. If your copy is from the 1990's (version 0.9) or earlier, you must update it. If you have Visual Studio Premium or Ultimate (version 0.9 or later), you'll get a free copy. The product license is valid for computers of 2 GHz and 2 GB of RAM. Of course, a faster system allows you to process more samples. NetTraffic for VS2010 is a 32-bit application and a 64-bit version is also available. However, the 32-bit one works faster. In case you have Visual Studio 2010 Ultimate (64-bit), you'll get the 32-bit version (which is in the C# version). NetTraffic is a public program. It was released to Microsoft under the GNU General Public License (GPL). However, the authors state that commercial usage is possible, and they are looking for private companies that may be interested in the tool. While running the analyzer, you will be told about the results (some of the results are presented immediately, others require a while to load). The feedback is displayed on screen or shown as a log file, depending on the settings in the Preferences dialog. The analyzer for .NET can be used separately, the idea is to combine it with PVS-Studio, and build a powerful tool that can identify many bugs. It can also help you to become a better programmer. NetTraffic utilizes JIT Compiler, and therefore, when you create a new .NET project and open the solution, NetTraffic will be already there. If you run it using the Ctrl+R shortcut, you will be able to see the list of all classes that have leaks and the list of all methods from the leaks that have most of the times infinite loops. However, the analyzer will warn you that almost all of these methods are false positives, which means they are not
