Poe: Surreality Examined Poe: Surreality Examined is a documentary film by filmmaker and author Horace McCoy. Produced by the British Film Institute, the film explores in depth the poetry of Edgar Allan Poe, and is perhaps the best existing single-disc 'one-stop shop' for those looking for background information on Poe and his literary career. In Poe: Surreality Examined, McCoy examines the claim made by some researchers that Poe was a homosexual, concentrating on the question of whether he was promiscuous, whether he had sex with the same woman more than once, and if so, whom. Poe scholar/biographer Douglas L. Klopfer, who held that Poe was a homosexual, notes that the claim of promiscuity, despite being taken up by biographer John L. O'Sullivan, is tenuous, and that evidence suggesting that he did have sex with the same woman more than once is hard to come by. McCoy's examination of Poe's poetry, however, shows that it is Poe's poetry which is, in fact, especially interesting, and he writes that Poe's homosexuality was revealed only when critics tried to "explain away his transgressive uses of gender".

Release The documentary was first seen at the Birmingham Film Festival in May 2008 and was released on DVD in the UK in July of the same year. It has also been shown in the US, in Richmond in Virginia, at Poe's Grave and other locations around the US. It was also shown on television in Spain in 2013 with various cast members from the film also attending the taping. McCoy states that he does not believe that his film is definitive, and indeed many of the issues he examines are still being debated, such as the claim by some that Poe was cuckolded, or, as another theory suggests, that Poe was a hermaph
