Download: WindowsA model to evaluate the interaction between ozone and airway inflammation. In this study, we examined the role of ozone in modulating the acute inflammatory response in the mouse model. Intranasal instillation of tumor necrosis factor-alpha (TNF-alpha) resulted in a dose-dependent influx of polymorphonuclear leukocytes (PMNs) into the airways, and ozone pre-exposure resulted in a significant reduction in the influx of PMNs in a dose-dependent manner. The numbers of PMNs in the lavage fluid were also decreased in mice given TNF-alpha and ozone pre-exposure, indicating that ozone exerts its anti-inflammatory effect after PMN influx had occurred. To examine the mechanism of the anti-inflammatory effect of ozone, we measured the plasma levels of TNF-alpha and interleukin-1beta (IL-1beta) and assessed the in vitro release of TNF-alpha from the peritoneal cells after ozone exposure. We found that ozone pre-exposure had no significant effect on the levels of IL-1beta or TNF-alpha. We also examined the effect of ozone pre-exposure on the TNF-alpha release from peritoneal cells by TNF-alpha stimulation. We found that ozone pre-exposure had no effect on TNF-alpha release from peritoneal cells stimulated by TNF-alpha. These results suggest that ozone attenuates the influx of PMNs into the airways after TNF-alpha instillation and that the anti-inflammatory effect of ozone is not mediated through the levels of TNF-alpha and IL-1beta.22)* Therefore, all patients should have a thorough preoperative workup, and liver biopsy should be performed in any patient with HCV who is having a TIPS procedure.
