In addition to allergic rhinitis and asthma, atopic patients show higher prevalence of bronchial hyperreactivity, chronic cough, and breathlessness. The discovery of therapeutic agents for atopic diseases is a longstanding goal of clinical medicine. The use of anti-histamines and bronchodilators has been the foundation for successful treatment. However, these drugs may be ineffective in other subsets of atopic patients. Physicians can now choose among medications to treat patients with atopic diseases. In this regard, most clinical trials have tested efficacy and safety of anti-allergic drugs such as monoclonal antibodies, leukotriene receptor antagonists, and phosphodiesterase-4 inhibitors. Meanwhile, the identification of genetic factors that modulate susceptibility for atopic diseases has brought hope for the development of more effective drugs. In this review, we summarize recent evidence about epidemiology, pathophysiology, and treatment of bronchial diseases in atopic patients.Q: How to remove element from collection without getting to the index of collection I have different collection of documents which is like this [{id:"B1",name:"XXX"},{id:"B2",name:"YYY"}...] I have a method which works like this: 1. Create new document with name currentElement 2. Loop through all documents and see if the document.id is equal currentElement's id 3.
