I've built a script which asks the user to input some information for an application: first name, last name, an address, and zip code. Then the script asks the user to choose a color for the front page of their new home. I'd like to apply the theme to the text that the user inputs. Is there a way to do this? A: You can set the theme value to a text widget, just do something like from tkinter import * root = Tk() data = StringVar() v = Entry(root, textvariable=data) v.grid(row=0, column=0) def set_theme(): color_var = ColorVar(root) color_var.set(Lookup("green", "blue")) color_var.set(Lookup("red", "black")) Button(root, text = "Choose Colors", command = set_theme).grid(row=1, column=0, sticky = "e") root.mainloop() Alternatively you can use the textvariable parameter of the Entry widget: import Tkinter as tk root = tk.Tk() data = tk.StringVar() data.set("You have been set to the theme: %s" % Lookup("green", "blue")) entry = tk.Entry(root, textvariable=data) entry.grid(row=0, column=0) root.mainloop() The lookups return the color names for that particular theme (ie "green" for the theme you have selected). This proposal requests continued support for a Training Program in Child Psychiatry at Washington University. The Program's specific goals are to provide postdoctoral fellows a sophisticated foundation in clinical child psychiatry, while also enabling them to explore basic and applied aspects of the neurobiology and psychopharmacology of developmental psychopathology. Clinical fellows gain both theoretical and clinical knowledge through interactions with a well-established group of academic clinicians who are at the forefront of research in their areas of clinical expertise, and through teaching 3da54e8ca3
