* **Adobe Photoshop Lightroom:** Like Photoshop, Adobe's Lightroom is layer-based and offers some of the same benefits and options for editing images. Its tutorial-driven approach, however, makes it even easier to learn how to use Photoshop and its tools, and many graphic artists are still loyal to Lightroom because of the more robust features.

* **Fusion:** For video and photo editing, Adobe developed its own software to combine still images or video clips with audio tracks and also to edit and animate 3D videos. Although this software, Fusion, has limitations compared to Adobe Photoshop, it is still very popular among digital artists because it supports multiple file types, including photos, and allows the combination of video and still images into a single project. In fact, multiple images and video clips can be edited on one canvas.

* **Movie Maker:** This software, introduced in 2007, is popular with those who produce online videos, which are then shared on social media sites, YouTube, and so forth. This software can edit and create videos and, since it is cross-platform, run on the computers or tablets of all those who have it installed. The Photoshop website doesn't offer any way for you to check whether your software version is up to date. Fortunately, you can find the latest version of Photoshop on the company website.

Filters Filters are a way of altering an image — adding or removing different elements of an image, such as the image's background color or color effects. Filters work in the Layers and Channels areas in Photoshop's workspace. Using a filter essentially makes the applied filter an overlay, or overlying layer, of the original image. Filters are commonly used to add or remove color, adjust color balance, add gradients, simulate different types of camera, and so on. After you apply a filter to an image, go back to the Layers area and place a layer over the area where you applied the filter, as shown in Figure 10-1. This process reverses what the filter did — it removes the filter's color changes from the original image. FIGURE 10-1: Go back to the Layers area and place a layer over the area where you applied the filter. The filter can also be applied to an existing layer (such as a background layer). To do so, select the layer that has the image you want to edit and, in the Layers area,

the skills you need to succeed in your career. Our Photoshop Elements online courses help get you up and running and you can learn and master any skill from computer programming to drawing and design. We are sharing the best PSD templates for web designers, Photoshop Elements beginners and tutorials for Photoshop CS5 users to make the most of it. You can use these Photoshop CS5 templates and create your own web designs. However, if you have just started out using Photoshop, Photoshop Elements or Adobe Photoshop, here are some of the best Photoshop tutorials for you. Learn how to create a photoshop animated gif here. What is a Photoshopped GIF? One of the most common ways of sharing images on the web is by sharing them as images or as a link to an image. When you share an image, it gets uploaded to the web and that image file is uploaded to the server as a default. Since most people are not very tech-savvy, and they will find it hard to understand the technical jargon associated with it, they just use the images that they receive on their computer as a normal file. When you want to share an image online, you need to use the Adobe Photoshop PSD files that you download on your computer. You also need to convert the Photoshop file to a jpeg or a gif format that is compatible with any web browser. The best quality photoshop designs are all Adobe Photoshop PSD files which you can download on your computer and use as you wish. More Photoshop tutorials on Web Design and UI/UX design. A web design is the set of artistic elements that you design for the web. It is the art of creating web pages, creative design, logos, and other designs for the Web. A web designer is just a person who has the skill to create these web designs for you. Designing a website for a business can be very tough and it can take a lot of time if you don't over to the voting booth. All votes submitted on 10/24/11 have been counted and verified. A special thanks to the team at Stock Display for their support of the blog. Visit their website. As many of you know, I, along with many of you, participate in the One Book One Chicago program, which puts one book in the hands of a Chicagoan, and one book in the hands of a Chicagoan's child. This year, we have teamed up with Critical Illness Network to provide three different levels of selection to the One Book One Chicago program: Level 1: We will have a table at the event where you will have the opportunity to select one book that will get read by a sibling of a person who is currently fighting cancer. Level 2: We will have a table where you will have the opportunity to select two books and they will be distributed to have read by a friend who is fighting cancer. Level 3: We will have a table where you will have the opportunity to select four books and they will be distributed to have read by a teacher or family friend who is fighting cancer. If you are unable to select or donate a book for the One Book One Chicago program, we'll still accept donations for the cause. You can donate books at our table in the South Wing or you can visit the Critical Illness Network's table in the North Wing. (Nancy and I will be holding the "Needs" table in the South Wing, so please be sure to stop by if you have an item that you would like to donate. We will also accept donations from our readers! All you have to do is let us know that you want a book on a postcard. You can send postcards to us at jesteressinla@gmail.com.) If you have a minute, check out Nancy's interview with her mom about her "Needs" project. We are so proud of Nancy and the amazing work she does for this cause. I cannot think of a better way to celebrate National Breast Cancer Awareness Month than to educate and empower people about breast cancer. In order to make this possible, we need to raise money, so please, if you can, consider contributing to this worthy cause. Just a reminder that we will be in the lobby of the Hilton Chicago on October 24th from 7:00-8:15 am. We will be set up in the lobby in front of all of the markets. Horse Whisperer's Pyramid: Decoding the Language of the Horse The horse whisperer, who exists in the world of horse whispering, can communicate nonverbally, utilizing his tone of voice and body language to convey his message without having to speak. In other words, the whisperer, who has learned the language of the horse and has become fluent in it, can use the horse's language to offer the horse guidance and a communication of comfort. In this DVD from the National Horse Center, Lisa D. Ross offers an in-depth look at the horse whisperer's language, as well as a hands-on workshop you can learn the principles of the horse whisperer's language at home with your own horse. You'll learn how to find your horse's language, for instance, the horse's version
