It's like the internet for audio and video!Interrelationships between myometrial contractile activity and the maternal hemodynamics of the hypoxic, non-laboring uterus. Partial occlusions of the uterine blood flow in anesthetized non-laboring rats were associated with a linear increase in the frequency of phasic contractions in the subendometrial myometrial tissue. Neither the depth of the partial occlusion nor the degree of hypoxia present in the hindlimb vasculature affected the frequency of these contractions. At corresponding times, the heart rates, blood pressures, and diastolic pressure changes produced by submaximal electrical stimulation were unchanged, which suggests that no significant alteration of either central or peripheral cardiovascular control occurred in response to these disturbances in blood supply. However, the temporal pattern of the oxygen consumption per gram of myometrial tissue was altered in a manner consistent with those findings in other studies. Thus, the data suggest that during the first few minutes of regional hypoxia there is an increase in the metabolic rate of the myometrium in spite of the lack of change in mechanical activity. But the reaction of many Republicans to the now-infamous "Access Hollywood" tape of Trump bragging about sexually assaulting women was to bat their teeth and go on the attack. They heaped the blame on John Podesta, the chairman of Hillary Clinton's presidential campaign, and... they accused Hillary of having a "locker room" mentality, and an insatiable appetite. The sense of the country was going to be the next president. Trump himself was baffled that she had won, and it wasn't just a matter of feeling bad about losing. He claimed to have been robbed. "We're led by a woman who doesn't have a clue," he ranted on Twitter.
