This unit describes methods for analyzing the presence and quantity of amplified DNA by electrophoresis through polyacrylamide or agarose gels. These methods can be used as convenient alternatives to radioactive DNA hybridization techniques and other methods for determining specific nucleic acid sequences. The specific sequence detection methods presented in this unit are most often used for research applications, but they are also applicable to the detection and characterization of DNA polymorphisms. What if I wrote a movie? Tag: Albert Herman Another good bit of “getting things done” today, just a few hours after my last post was published. Mostly comprised of meetings and phone calls, it was not a big productive day, but great to see the business finally roll for a couple of hours while I have a social life. I have not been able to “sleep” for about 30+ years. At one time I would sleep in
