A: For your first question, the fact that the plural of god is gods only. The singular plural of god is gods. For the second, technically no, but which of the three is more fitting depends on how you want to interpret it. The verb implies more than just the current form of money. It implies money in general, and a sum of money in particular. Depending on what else you want to say, the term may fit any of the three. If you say that he spent the money on food, then you might use pago, or voto. If it was a voting bloc, then it makes more sense to use bloco. If you want to use the money to buy wine, it would be comprar. In general, the literal translation is the most common. And you should be using that in your speech. The present invention relates to a medical device for use in sealing a puncture in an inner wall of a vessel. A percutaneous transluminal angioplasty (PTA) is known from the European Application No. 56 513 in the name of Boehringer Mannheim Corporation. Said application describes a device for sealing a puncture in the vessel, which sealing device comprises a support element, a sealing member, a mounting element and a plurality of springs. The support element is designed to be inserted through a vessel wall and the sealing member is fitted on the support element to form a tubular structure. The mounting element holds the sealing member at a predetermined distance from the support element. One end of the support element is held by the mounting element and the springs are located between the support element and the mounting element. An object of the present invention is to provide a medical device for use in sealing a puncture in an inner wall of a vessel, said device being simple in construction and providing a reliable sealing action, resulting
