I found my 3D Printer again! SUMMIT, illinois, United States THE SUMMIT I found the dremel to be a much better drill than the cordless. Any way my friend told me that at his house he had cut open a tarantula to get the guts out which resulted in only the body and the head, and he had to use the dremel to remove it. He took a coke can in the house and used the dremel to remove the top and bottom. Now I have only small cotton balls but I can at least put his eyes back in. Thanks to Aliexpress I can have my eyes back, I had to change the drill bit to make it long enough to get it to enter in his head. He actually had to do it to himself. THE WORK I was thinking that using the dremel should be good enough, I was afraid of scratching the glass, but I was wrong, I realized that its better with more force not to damage the glass. I also used the miter saw to cut the piece down to size. I actually called to the stuff I bought the miter saw from and asked if he had ever used it for glass before and he said no, its his first time. After that I used the router to cut the piece down. Its a piece of plywood that we bought for our crafts table, and a hole in the middle of it which can hold a lighter for more convenient use. THE PROBLEM The heaviest thing that I had to pick up and move was the printer, and you can see that it really isn't so heavy, it fell three times! The first time was when I was moving it from my bed to the table and the second time when I was putting it in the car with one side facing down. The third time was when I was picking it up from the floor. The first fall wasn't that big of a deal because I had already picked it up the second time. The third time, I heard it crack, so I called the guy to fix it. He said that it cracked right through the plastic holder, which I found out later, that the plastic holder is the one that holds the filament. Also the plastic holder got stuck in the fall, and that's what caused the crack. So I took it out and put it back in and it started working fine. THE VERDICT
