Monday, February 25, 2013 As soon as I posted the first version of "Crimson Demon", my old friend, the human the internet, raged at me. He was shouting, "This is heresy, heretic! Thou shalt not write about DAZ, human!", and of course he's right, I shouldn't have blogged it without permission. So here is the text of my email to him, explaining what I was doing. "I'm sorry, Tim." We'll have a lot more to say to each other later, but for now, this will have to do.  Here's the thing. This is a very strange time in the history of games, and I'm not always sure what is going on. My interest in DAZ-- at least the parts of it that come through in the writing I do-- is in the bizarre, and the peculiarities of the software are a big part of that. I've played with hundreds of different 3D modeling programs over the years, and I've tried to understand the software. But DAZ is so weird. Some of this is simply cosmetics and presentation issues. (I see mostly male players for my games, and I'm not sure why that might be.) At the heart of all this, however, is a growing realization that, if not magic, the way DAZ works is extremely powerful. If you've ever sat down to play, your thoughts went something like this: "I can see a lot of nice things about DAZ, but I'm starting with a bunch of characters that are uncomfortably near the center of my character group. This is going to take a while." Or "Oh, it's hard to do eye-to-eye interaction. I can't work with a group of people that suddenly have a different scale. I'm going to have to go back to MM5 to get an equalizer." How many of you started with an MM5 character and worked your way to DAZ? Yes, this is a total fantasy-- the DAZ version of MM5 was first, and I don't know how old some of you are. But now we're at a time when there is a universe of MP3/MP4 games-- a lot of them-- and the change from the download of the character to having to place it into an MP3 player is very rare. The MP3 player

Q: load the image of the folder by index in objective c I need to load the image of the folder by index. I load the image by this code. - (UIImage *)imageWithName:(NSString *)name { NSArray *paths = NSSearchPathForDirectoriesInDomains(NSDocumentDirectory, NSUserDomainMask, YES); NSString *documentsDirectory = [paths objectAtIndex:0]; NSString *path = [documentsDirectory stringByAppendingPathComponent:@"myImages"]; [self moveImageFromResourcePath:@"default.png" toPath:path]; UIImage *image = [UIImage imageNamed:@"default.png"]; return image; } - (void)moveImageFromResourcePath:(NSString *)fromPath toPath:(NSString *)toPath { BOOL success = [[NSFileManager defaultManager] copyItemAtPath:fromPath toPath:toPath error:nil]; if (success) { NSLog(@"Recupero, il file è stato salvato correttamente con successo"); } else { NSLog(@"Pericolo, hanno prodotto problemi nell'operazione di recupero. Il file è stato rimosso con successo"); } } How can I load only the image of the index? In array I have more than 30 images. A: Use NSPredicate to filter the array. Using this you will be able to get only the images as per your condition. NSPredicate *predicate = [NSPredicate predicateWithFormat:@"%K = %@", @"index", [NSNumber numberWithInt:i]]; NSArray *filteredArray = [yourarray filteredArrayUsingPredicate:predicate]; This would get you the array of image with the index as the filter,
