I have the following syntax: enum MyEnum { A = 'a' B = 'b' } and I need to write a function to check if it is a valid enum, so if the enum is not in the correct format the function should return false. I currently tried the following: isValidEnum(value: Enum): boolean { return (value as any) === value || (value as any) === '1' || (value as any) === undefined; } but this produces the following error: error TS2317: Property 'A' does not exist on type 'Enum' The question is: How do I compare an enum property with an enum value in typescript? A: You could define a custom helper function like the following: function compareTo(value: any, enum: T): boolean { if (!value instanceof T) { // error return false; } if (typeof enum !== "symbol") { return compare((enum as any) === value); } return (enum as any) === value; } function isValidEnum(value: Enum): boolean { return compare(value, value) === true; } try Q: WCF for monitoring a web site I am relatively new to WCF, and I think I am over- 1cdb36666d
