How can I do this? A: You cannot, since MyClass is a dependent name, meaning there is no way to define function typedefs of MyClass in the specialization. For example, this is illegal: `template struct MyClass { typedef void MyClass::func(int i); //... };` because the MyClass part of the name of the type should be a class template name. The only way to do that is to explicitly specialize the type: `template struct MyClass : public MyClass { //... };` d0c515b9f4 can capture on your hikes, long drives, or wherever you roam. Have fun! The judges will pick the best entries, and the winner will get his or her photo posted here to share with us all! *** That's all I got, Ciao Below are some pics I took this afternoon. A bird sat on the grass outside of the store where I work. You see, in the summertime, we have a lot of seagulls around the store. Most of them like to sit on the roofs, but this one flew on in while the store was closed for the lunch break. This was the first time I'd seen it during the open hours. I believe you can see the Post Office in the background. The sign on the roof says "Crawford Mailing Service." Tucked on the outskirts of the town, there's a large cemetery. A visitor is welcome to walk around at any time. I took my dog for a walk on the trail that leads down to the village center. You can see the church on the other side of the mountain. I've hiked this trail many times, and this was the first time the trail was in "winter mode." No comments: About Me Hi, I'm Corinne. I love being out in nature, especially hiking. I'm a newly retired teacher, and will be enjoying my time traveling, gardening, reading, and eating lots of chocolate.
