Any ideas on how to solve this issue? I would like to send it to a friend who A: I had this problem too on my Windows 7 machine. It seems to be an unsupported setting called "Extend to System for ALL FOLDERS" which is located in Windows 7 in "Folder Options".

This option wasn't turned on. It was turned on by default on my Windows XP machine. So I think that your PC maybe runs fine on Windows 7 but not on Windows XP. I deleted all folders from my "Documents and Settings" folder on Windows 7 but my "All Users" folder where this setting is located. Then I restarted my computer and now my Windows 7 runs fine. My guess is that this setting have to be deleted on your Windows XP too but I don't know how. I found that setting by opening the "Folder Options" in the folder "Computer" and then navigating to "Folder and File" tab. Then click on the "View" dropdown menu and select "Folder Options". Then "Allow files and folders from this folder to be extended to system wide" should be unchecked. Make sure you click on "Ok" to save your changes. Now try to open a folder containing .wmv files and see whether it runs fine or not.

Reviews by Chikkarado: Pours hazy dark orange with hints of copper and a soft white head that sticks around for awhile leaving some slight lacing on the glass. The aroma is of sweet malt, earthy yeast, & soft light citrus notes with minimal hop aroma. Taste is dominated by a sweet, caramel malt taste with a slightly nutty and earthy yeast. Spicy yeast and soft light hops in the finish. Mouthfeel is light with good carbonation and smooth. Overall, a good body, carbonation and smoothness to this beer but the aroma is rather weak. Would I seek this beer out again? Probably not as this was a mixed bag of flavors all together.

More User Reviews: Poured into a pint glass. Nice orange color, with a white/light tan head. Smell is fairly funky, with some citrus and hops, and a touch of wheat bread. Taste is nice, I love the funky taste that these beers offer. There is a touch of citrus with toasted malt, and some earth
