known as YTS or YIFY Movies)

is a free BitTorrent search engine and an associated download and indexing service. YIFY was acquired by the DVD information hub Kochava in January 2010. On September 16, 2011, Kochava announced that the website and service would be renamed YIFY. The service's name YIFY is derived from the term "You is free." The YIFY site resembles the website of its predecessor, the movie torrent search engine YTS. YIFY is available for Windows, Mac and Linux via Java applet and the website's popular Torrent Download implementation (in use since the.torrent search engine days), and it can download torrents from other.torrent websites as well, which is a.

YIFY is based in Berlin, Germany. The YIFY website is controlled by the team of independent developer Alex deVries and is led by chief designer Kailin Cheng, both from Hong Kong. The website and software have been downloaded over two million times in the first couple of months after its launch on the 14th of October. For comparison, that's about 0.5% of the total population of Europe, or five times that of Japan and. However, the user base is growing quickly. Today, there are 350 torrent sites using the YIFY software and YIFY is the preferred torrent search engine for millions of people. The YIFY service has grown tremendously from the start with approximately 300 torrents on the first day of its launch. As of today, there are more than 180,000 torrents on YIFY and around 15,000 seeders.. The current speed for downloading is more than 100 MB/s. The site is distributed worldwide through BitTorrent peer-to-peer technology. YIFY.tv is the official website of the service and is available in English, German, French, Japanese and Chinese. The service is free of charge to everyone..

YIFY is a free service and the site itself does not make a profit. The founders of the project are not affiliated with the same group that
