Ask HN: How can I market a side-project like an e-book? - sravfeyn The gist of the idea is to create an e-book that can be used by all kinds of people, no matter what level of technical expertise they have, and can act as a source of (free) information, or the first introduction to a certain topic. I do understand that using the web-page alone (as well as I did) is not enough to create interest in readers. So, is the best approach to promote the e-book to the people who are likely to be interested in it, and a typical e-book goes to the people who are likely to already know about the topic, if there is any pattern in the demographics that HN readers belong to? ===== kasbah Write an explanation of the topic, for beginners, in a blog, and start commenting that on other websites. Make the blog separate from the e-book project so it can have its own url. Add those extra features like the book, make the commenting a bit more interactive etc. If you can create a community around the book you'll have a successful project
