The Motion of the Sun The Motion of the Sun is the fifth studio album by British post-punk band Killing Joke. It was recorded in Woodworm Studios in London and produced by Martin Rushent. The album was released on 29 September 1990 on Mute Records. It peaked at number 17 on the UK Albums Chart. Background The album takes its name from a conversation between Jaz Coleman and Andrew Bell (the band's drummer from 1990 to 1997) on a train to Birmingham with their equipment. The album was mixed by Rushent in Woodworm Studios in London in January 1990. A remastered version of the album was released on 12 October 2010, including two bonus tracks: the original version of "Betrayal" and a previously unreleased song, "Remembrances". The packaging also included limited edition posters and flyers. The remastered edition can also be found in the boxset "The Killing Joke Box Set", released on 5 October 2010. Content The last Killing Joke album to feature the original line-up is "The Motion of the Sun" (which also made Killing Joke the last band to have worked with composer David McAlmont). The music on the album has been described as dark and in contrast to Killing Joke's past works. "Scarred for Life" is a live favourite and is accompanied by a video featuring Jaz Coleman's daughter, Jarra Coleman. "Feeling Better" was released as a single in 1991 and remains Killing Joke's best-selling song to date. The music video - which includes images from Ramona Butts' personal collection - is based on the book True Confessions by Thomas Defoe. The music video for "The Dream" was banned on MTV for being too violent. Reception
