Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for fabricating a semiconductor device, and more particularly, to a method for fabricating a semiconductor device having a self-aligned source/drain (S/D) structure. 2. Background of the Invention With regard to the fabrication of a semiconductor device having an S/D structure, a process is conventionally adopted to cover a gate electrode over a predetermined region of an active region of a semiconductor substrate with a spacer formed on sidewalls of the gate electrode, thereby forming a source region and a drain region of the active region in an S/D structure. However, as semiconductor devices are scaled down, the thickness of the spacer formed on the sidewalls of the gate electrode becomes thinner, thereby causing a phenomenon in which a contact between the spacer and the gate electrode is overly focused (i.e., the overlap between the spacer and the gate electrode is increased). This phenomenon may occur in a process for forming a contact hole. A spacer is conventionally formed to have an oxide layer formed between the spacer and 648931e174
