In the build, players are immersed in an environment that not only showcases the intensity of real-world soccer, but the realism of interaction within the game as well. Players can now strike each other with power and accuracy while defending against players and counter-attacking. They can also control the ball with their feet in the air, avoiding interceptions and making runs and through-balls. The game also features an improved and more demanding player control and physicality system. Players' running mechanics are enhanced, while tackling power and acceleration have been significantly increased. The ever-evolving engine not only powers FIFA's largest team and player roster ever, it also enables both PlayStation VR and new Augmented Reality (AR) experiences, with the ability to live stream matches. "We've been working hard to push the boundaries of technology and deliver the most realistic and immersive experience available on PlayStation," said Stefan Beckers, Chief Technology Officer at EA SPORTS. "Now, with HyperMotion Soccer, we've opened the door to a completely new universe of fun and entertainment, one that can engage a much wider audience." HyperMotion is the pinnacle of digital innovation, designed to bring the world of football to life, delivering an experience unlike any other on PlayStation. With improved AI, a new physics engine and the introduction of extensive player and environment animations, FIFA's digital universe will feel more realistic and more alive than ever before. The new FIFA World Cup is the biggest and most authentic World Cup to date - let the world know how you feel about the tournament in augmented reality. Madden NFL 20 has a new "Running Tackles" mechanic that helps players create space and create plays. EA's tagline is "you shape the offense." In FIFA, the new build lets you take on opponents and decide the pace and style of football that suits you. HyperMotion Technology was inspired by the feats of LeBron James and Cristiano Ronaldo, with the FIFA Producer in charge of gameplay detail Sam Chen saying: "FIFA is driven by passion and innovation. Create your ultimate team using the power of Ultimate Team. Make your squad better, faster and stronger by drafting players and then buying the best players in the world. Utilise power-ups, earn valuable coins and get involved in head-to-head battles for your club with real players on the pitch. FIFA Ultimate Team Draft - Ultimate Team draft mode is accessible via the FIFA game settings menu. Once selected, you will have 15 minutes to build a team from the 46 FUT players on the FIFA roster. During the game session, you can manage as many picks as you'd like. The rate at which you do this will determine the number of coins and players you earn. EA SPORTS Football Club - Newcomers to EA SPORTS Football Club can have fun and become the best player in FIFA by competing with other players in one of 30 active football leagues. Take part in all-new competitive leagues, including Leagues that reward winning, or try out for national clubs in the eFootball PES 2019 Leagues mode. And play your way through the eFootball PES 2019 game, using more than 170 officially licensed kits and real-world player movement. iOS In addition to Android devices, FIFA 20 is available on iOS. Decision making At the start of the match, you can place your players on the pitch and give them instructions. You can choose whether they're going to make a run down the wing, cross the ball into the box, or score a shot on goal. In the main menu, you can choose specific formations. Each of the 22 teams in FIFA 20 has between three and five formations, some of which require a specific number of players. You can change formation in the Create a Club screen, if you'd rather get more accustomed to your preferred tactics. EA Sports will be releasing a patch on PC and Xbox One in the coming weeks that adds an online quick-match mode. This gives players the chance to play a quick game of 3v3 soccer, with small tweaks to the gameplay. Offline gameplay is more of a traditional experience; you can set a match to be played on a specific day, and then you'll be presented with a virtual pitch and a calendar with the opposition. You'll be able to play 11 matches in a season if you wish. Career Mode will work much in the same way offline, with a new rival system to provide a more compelling challenge. In

What's new in Fifa 22:

- Expanded social marketplace for DLC features: Earn coins by winning and watch seasons of tournaments you might not have known about (part of this season will have the Copa America because the America in FIFA always won the Copa America because the America plays with pretzels in its pants.) Also, in a super bad-ass backwards move, EA has started charging for coins (Euros, not FIFA Points) which requires players to re-buy the damn stuff.
- Camila is now Mexican, because she appears in Mexico.
- Wandering around collects more stuff, which is the exact opposite of every other game.
- Female players finally get better shape. Now the best female player has the same ass as all the other female players.
- FIFA has finally started to catch up to women in other sports. NOW they all CAN dunk and have projectile-like speed.
- Future Player Ratings. Players' future performance is now a carefully-crafted statistical tool, with future stats based on previous performance.
- Performance-based Team Tactics. The most important addition in this version is a new Team Makeup system. Team Tactics actually affects what your strongest talent does, rather than just saying "More gunners!"
- Leg health. Hitting the ground while playing soccer is now much, much, much more harmful and important. Makes it much, much less fun if you are able to do soccer hits in FIFA 22.
- Mono camera. The standard FIFA camera is now capable of showing the game from two different viewpoints from one angle, as opposed to the five viewpoints before, which made watching this game much more frustrating in terms of maintaining your objectivity about the player's position and how close they are to the ball.
- New stadium cam. I am 99% sure this stadium cam is 'cause they haven't yet been able to add at least two stadium cams to every stadium in the game. That is all I have.
- Gameplay Assistant.
- New Superstar mode. You must now choose between pure superstardom or defeating rival players in inter-team competitions (1v1). This is the same as FIFA 21 where if you want to become the best player you need to defeat the other team in Inter-Team competitions. This was the only thing that was worth the $60 I spend on this
